"JAZZ" GIRL HEARS LIFE STORY TOLD

Father of Dorothy Ellingson Tells Court He Believes His Daughter is Surely Insane

GIRL SHIVERS AT ACCOUNT

Tells of Addiction to Alcoholic
Liquors Prior to Girl's Birth
And of Her "Tantrums"

(By Universal Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—Today was another hectic day for Dorothy Ellingson, a seventeen-year-old matricide. Among other things she heard her own father say he believed she was insane.

The story of the wayward life of the young girl, beginning at the age of 12, together with the pre-natal influences which are alleged to have affected her, were given in the morning tip of her father, Joseph Ellingson, on the witness stand in Superior Judge Harold Lunderback's court, where the girl's sanity hearing is being held.

The told of his separation from his wife, Dorothy's mother. He testified that an aunt of the girl died of tuberculosis. The father also declared that his daughter had always been a child larger than others of her age. Dorothy was never punished, he said, and attended Sunday school infrequently. Ellingson and his wife, according to the witness, attended no church themselves after their wedding.

Joseph Ellingson told of his Nordic ancestry, and said Mrs. Ellingson was also of that extraction.

He was asked if he was addicted to alcoholic liquors before Dorothy's birth.

"I used it pretty heavy at that time," he answered.

He described alleged fits of temper on the part of Dorothy, during which she hit her fingernails. Dorothy was not very truthful, he said. "She seemed to want to tell lies most of the time," the father declared.

Concluding his direct examination, the father expressed his belief his daughter is insane.

Dorothy shivered like a leaf as she heard these words but pulled herself together.

A series of X-ray photographs were introduced late in today's court session which, according to Radiographer Frank McCormick, showed unusually early development of Dorothy's wisdom teeth.

Today was the first day since her trial started that Dorothy did not faint in court. At times she appeared to be on the verge of collapse, but frequent recesses ordered by Judge Lunderback enabled her to recover her strength and continue in court.

The plea of Mrs. Issa Duarte for compensation for her husband who died as a result of injuries sustained at the American Smelting and Refining company at Selby last October, was heard before the State Industrial Accident Commission in the office of Police Judge C. The total fees taken into the building inspector's office during the month was $341.55.

NOTHING CAN HOLD US BACK

Richmond is now in a position where nothing can retard her progress. She MUST go forward. There is a Force—some call it Destiny, others Fate—behind her, forcing her onward, and it is irresistible. SHE COULD NOT STOP IF SHE WANTED TO.

Yesterday, the RECORD-HERALD published the biggest news story of several years. But then the RECORD-HERALD always leads with the BIG news stories. When we have told you first, what we started out to say then we will tell you, last, about one of our former big news scoops.

Our story yesterday was that the Ford Motor Company had decided to establish a factory here. It is coming; nothing can stop it. Proctor and Gamble will also be here, and soon. Their period of delay is about ended, and some fine day Richmond will wake up and find they have actually started work on a plant for 2,000 employees.

Actual work on the development of the inner harbor has been started; the airfield has been completed; the new community hotel is well under way.

There are many indications showing that the Finger of Destiny is behind Richmond—forcing her on. Things just naturally seem to happen here—"things" for the advancement of the community. WE ARE GOING AHEAD AND NOTHING CAN HOLD US BACK

Now, let us tell you about another big news story that "broke" in the RECORD-HERALD. It was only one of many such, but it was probably the biggest one recently.

That was the story of the Richmond-San Francisco ferry opening.

No one knew when it was going to take place. It was not expected for several months at least. People had heard such a ferry had been proposed. Some even knew the Southern Pacific company was building a Richmond ferry slip.

But the public had also heard that the proposition was tied up in litigation—and they doubted whether it would ever "come through."

What did we do? We found out. The RECORD-HERALD came out one morning with the announcement that the ferry service would actually open on January 15th. It did. But up to the time the RECORD-HERALD announced it, no one knew it, not even the secretary of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, whose ever watchful eyes are at all times guarding the interests of the community.

So, let us iterate, NO ONE SHOULD MISS READING THE RECORD-HERALD. IT WILL BE POSITIVELY DANGEROUS TO DO SO.

ENGINEERS OF FORD COMPANY TO VIEW SITE

Actual Survey of the Site for the Ford Motor Company Factory
Here to be Started Monday

CONFERENCE HELD YESTERDAY

Preliminary Investigation for Opening
Streets to Propose Plant
Made Here Yesterday

Definite announcement was made yesterday that engineers of the Ford Motor Company will arrive in Richmond Monday for the purpose of running surveys for the Ford plant to be erected in this city.

This is indisputable confirmation of the story published in the RECORD-HERALD yesterday to the effect that the Ford Motor company had decided to build its Pacific coast plant in Richmond. This is also another score for the RECORD-HERALD on its unequalled sources of news information.

After months of preliminary survey of various Pacific coast points, all of which made a bid for the factory, Mr. Henry Ford himself, it is stated, has given the order for the factory to be located in Richmond.

Numerous considerations entered into the decision. Richmond was finally chosen because it offers all the advantages claimed by other communities and none of the drawbacks.

HAS ALL ADVANTAGES

It has the harbor, with the city connected now by a harbor improvement, and the promise of government assistance on harbor work assured.

It has the railroad transportation. It has the land, many acres of it, perfectly level and almost ready to build upon. It has none of the crowded conditions, either industrial or residential, of neighboring communities.

Its location as a potential industrial center is ideal beyond comparison, and all these things had to be considered and grouped together before the final decision was made.

COMPLIMENT TO REALTORS

It is a splendid compliment to Richmond realtors that they have been taken into conference and consulted on the question. Their recommendations and their influence in securing a fair price on land, has gone a long way toward bringing the factory here, it is believed.

Through the honesty of local dealers a price fair to both property owners and the company is said to have been agreed upon. All that now remains to be done is purely a legal formality that will be attended to this week.

STEPS TAKEN YESTERDAY

Financiers of San Francisco, who have been negotiating in behalf of the Ford company, were in this city yesterday morning. They stated definitely that the factory will be built here.

Tentative steps toward having the city open streets into the factory site were taken yesterday. Inquiries were made as to whether streets had already been opened, or could be opened. Representatives were given assurance that the city would cooperate with them to the fullest extent.

Thirty acres of Richmond land will form the first nucleus of the Ford holdings here, and THE PRELIMINARY SURVEY WILL GET UNDER WAY MONDAY. IT IS DEFINITELY STATED.

Industrial Commission Protests Oil Company Bill

Joining in the county wide drive to prevent the adoption of Senator Breed's amendment, now before the State Legislature at Sacramento, making oil companies public utilities, the Richmond Industrial Commission wired a protest to Sacramento yesterday as follows:

April 2, 1925.
Committee
on Constitutional Amendments,
State Senate,
Sacramento, California,
Gentlemen:

The Richmond Industrial Commission, commercial organization of the City of Richmond, which has engaged in development work in this city almost from the time of its beginning and feels that it also has a good knowledge of affairs throughout the State in general, as it necessarily keeps in touch with all sections, wishes to state its belief that adoption of any measure making the oil companies public utilities would do inestimable harm to the State. In view of this our organization respectfully makes a protest to make oil and gasoline manufacturing companies public utilities.

Properties of many oil companies are located in various communities of California. As assessable wealth in these various communities they yield a public revenue on which these communities have grown to depend and any measure that would cut this revenue off would work hardship to thousands of other taxpayers, including farmers, business men, workers and others who could ill afford to bear the added burden should these taxes be diverted entirely into the State funds.

The credit of many of these communities has been established to a greater or lesser degree on the taxes yielded by assessable oil company property and in some cases absolute disaster would be the result in various sections all the way from the southern part of the State to the San Francisco Bay region. The prosperity of numerous communities that are now flourishing would be struck a blow from which it would be hard to recover.

Aside from the menace from loss of taxes by the various communities unable to stand such losses, a blow would be struck at the development of the great industry, and a strangling of operation and of enterprise in this line would follow to the injury of many thousands of workers and the general detriment of the prosperity of California.

Respectfully,
RICHMOND INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

Harry W. Wernse, secy. Harry Ellis, President.

Prohibition Enforcement Given

Prohibition Officer

6,000,000 GALLONS A YEAR

Treasury Officials Claim Enforcement
Will Cost Government
$65,000,000

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Wayne B. Wheeler, high mogul of the nation's dry forces, gave prohibition enforcement a black eye today, after a conference with President Coolidge at the White House.

Wheeler asserted that 6,000,000 gallons of industrial alcohol—enough to make 240,000,000 half-pints of 40 per cent synthetic gin—were being diverted annually into the bootleg trade. He laid the blame for the "leaks" on the internal revenue collectors in charge of the alcohol.

The Anti-Saloon League counsel had called to endorse the new plan for supervision of prohibition enforcement, under Lincoln C. Andrews, newly appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. He told the President that an extension of the supervision over other agencies engaged in dry enforcement would tend to more rigid enforcement.

Wheeler named New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Louisiana and Vermont—the President's native state—as the states in which prohibition is most lax.

Prohibition enforcement is costing the government $56,000,000 during the present fiscal year, treasury officials said today.

For this reason, it was said, Andrews has been made supervisor of all the prohibition work. Under the new system all the operations involving this vast expenditure will be under one central head.

During the present year the prohibition unit is spending $11,000,000, the coast guard $25,000,000 and the customs division $17,000,000.

Reservations Open For Training Camp

The Citizen's Military Training camps for California for 1925, will be two in number. E. M. Downer, president of the Richmond Mechanics bank, is chairman for Contra Costa county, and a few applications may be obtained from Frank B. Schumann at the Richmond Chamber of Commerce.

Camps are open to all boys between the ages of 17 and 31. The larger camp will be held at Del Monte for infantry, cavalry, field artillery, engineers, signal corps and basic. Contra Costa county is allotted 25 members for this camp. The smaller camp will be at Fort Winfield Scott, Presidio of San Francisco, and will be for coast artillery and basic. The allotment to Contra Costa county for this camp is four.

The Del Monte camp opens on July 21, and the Fort Scott camp opens on June 20. Both camps continue for 30 days. These camps constitute the principal source from which reserve officers will be secured. Early application is urged as the county's quota will be quickly filled.

WATER CONCERN VS. THE PUBLIC

From The San Francisco Examiner, April 2

There's more than first appears to this movement of the East Bay Water Company to build a new extension to the lower Sacramento River and bring in "filtered sewage" for the East Bay cities to drink.

In the various discussions, it has been brought out that the additional $9,500,000 which the new project would add to the value of the East Bay company would increase its total valuation to a point exceeding the bonding resources of the East Bay Public Utility District.

In other words, the water company would increase its value to a point where its condemnation and purchase by the public would become impossible.

And it would do this, not by carrying out an improvement which the people want, but by building a project which the East Bay public engineers have examined and rejected; one which they think altogether undesirable of itself; one which, furthermore, would duplicate the Mokelumne project in some sort, and might make some voters think the Mokelumne project unnecessary.

In principle, a corporation and particularly a public service corporation is merely the agent of the people in carrying out an essential function. Such a concern as the East Bay Water Company holds its charter from the people, and its regulated by the State in the people's interest.

When, as in the East Bay cities, the people have voted to take the function of water-supplying back into their own hands, it means they have decided to dispense with the agency of the corporation.

For this rejected agent, therefore, to seek once more to take matters into its own hands, build an opposing project of its own and force it upon the district in the end, is simply effrontery.

The East Bay District is right to protest. And the Railroad Commission should support the people.

PAVEMENTS THAT STAND UP

North Carolina boasts the longest asphaltic-type hard-surfaced highway east of the Rocky Mountains. It extends from Wilson, via Wilmington, to Jacksonville, a distance of 165 miles. It is second only to the Columbia River highway for an unbroken stretch of this type of waterproof pavement.

The longest continuous paved road in the world is said to be the Pacific highway from British Columbia to Mexico. The only break in the hard-surfacing is for a short distance in Northern California.

Hundreds of miles of this road are of the asphaltic-concrete type similar to the Columbia River highway which has given some ten years of service with no maintenance cost for the pavement. Pacific coast states have probably spent more money in paving roads per capita of population, than any other section of the country. They have learned by dear experience that two things are essential to a permanent road: first, a properly constructed base which is kept free from the seepage effect of water; secondly, a pavement that is able to absorb the impact and vibration of heavy automobile traffic without shattering and crystallizing.

OUTPOSTS OF COMMERCE

Ninety-four outposts of American commerce in foreign countries, many of them in the remote corners of the earth, are given in the revised list of United States Trade Promotion Agencies Abroad issued by the Foreign Commerce Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Thirty-seven of these are American Chambers of Commerce. In China alone there are eight of these institutions at Changsha, Hankow, Harbin, Mukden, Peking, Shanghai, Tientsin and Tsingtau, all of which are combined in the Associated American Chambers of Commerce of China. Chambers are also maintained in Poland, Jugoslavia, South Africa, Egypt, Haiti, Czechoslovakia. In Brazil there are four.

The remainder of the list consists of commercial attaches and trade commissioners maintained by the government and a supplemental list contains the names of several hundred foreign cities in which there are American consular representatives.

BUSINESS BOOSTS THE RETAILER

The small retail merchant might consider himself a diminutive cog in the elaborate mechanism that constitutes American business—sometimes written with a "Big B"—but that does not appear to be the view of business itself. What the latter thinks of the retailer was expressed by Richard F. Grant, President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in an address before the National Retail Dry Goods Association:

"The retail merchant of this great land of ours," he said, "has a sacred trust in his hands, because he is the point of contact between business and the great run of American citizens. The viewpoint of the American citizen regarding business is largely crystallized and molded and formed by the retail merchant, because, as I have said, he constitutes the great point of contact between the citizenry of the country and business."

Straight Lines Give Way to Moulded Silhouette in New Frocks

IT would doubtless be difficult to get a jury of fashion observers to agree on the question of the latitude of the waistline. If you look to Paris as the source of every fashion, and think the only "authentic" fashions are those that emanate from the dressmakers' establishments along the banks of the Seine, you may still be at sea. From some of those who have viewed the spring offerings of these dressmakers you may learn that the waistline is as low as ever, sometimes lower. From others you may get the rather unsatisfactory dictum that the waistline no longer counts. While others insist that there is evident a decided tendency to bring the much disputed waistline back to normal.

Our own opinion is that at the present time the waist itself rather than the waistline is coming into significance. The waistline of the frock may be below the hips, but the slenderness of the waist is defined by the cut or draping of the bodice. Frocks may be without any belt, girdle, or waistline whatever and yet be so moulded as to reveal the natural tapering of the waist.

Patou is one of the well-known

French dressmakers who in many instances has raised the waistline to a position above the hips. Premet has hit upon the idea of making a higher waistline in front, leaving the back as straight and as beltless as ever.

The sketch shows a frock that carries out this device of Premet. It is of sand-colored crepe de chine and has a high waistline in front, leaving the back as straight and as beltless as ever.

There are several ways of departing from the straight line that has ruled for so long. You may accentuate the curve of the bust line, after the manner of Drecoll, Lanier, Madeleine et Madeleine-Anne. You may show the curve of the hips, following the example of Bernard, Talbot, Poiret and others; or you may follow the example of Patou, and others, by showing a more closely drawn waistline.

GAS LIGHTING

Dr. John Cayton, about 1688, is supposed to have been the first to produce illuminating gas from coal. He used the gas, however, merely as a scientific toy. Munlock, who had offices near Soho, London, was the first to use gas for practical lighting purposes; he made a system for his offices in 1792.

He could hear the ravening snap of those jaws out in the darkness. It was sickening. His hand went to the Colt .45 at his belt, and he thrust his empty rifle butt downward into the snow. With the big automatic before his eyes he plunged out into the darkness, and from his lips there issued a wild yelling that could have been heard a mile away. With the yelling a steady stream of fire spat from the Colt into the mass of fighting beasts. There were eight shots in the automatic, and not until the plunger clicked with metallic emptiness did Carvel cease his yelling and retreat in to the firelight. He listened, breathing deeply. He no longer saw eyes in the darkness, nor did he hear the movement of bodies. The suddenness and ferocity of his attack had driven back the wolf-horde. But the dog! He caught his breath, and strained his eyes. A shadow was dragging itself into the circle of light. It was Baree. Carvel ran to him, put his arms under his shoulders, and brought him to the fire. For a long time after that there was a questioning light in Carvel's eyes. He reloaded his guns, put fresh fuel on the fire, and from his pack man. He had been dead for many days, and was frozen stiff. Carvel chopped a hole in the earth and buried him.

The cabin was a treasure trove to Carvel and Baree, and especially to the man. It evidently possessed no other owner than the one who had died; it was comfortable and stocked with provisions; and more than that its owner had made a splendid catch of fur before he died. Carvel went over them carefully and joyously. They were worth a thousand dollars at any post, and he could see no reason why they did not belong to him now. Within a week he had blazed out the dead man's snow-covered trap-line and was trapping on his own account.

This was two hundred miles north and west of the Gray Loon, and soon Carvel observed that Baree did not face directly south in those moments when the strange call came to him, but south and east. And now, with each day that passed, the sun rose higher in the sky; it grew warmer; the snow softened underfoot, and in the air was the tremulous and growing throb of spring. With these things came the old yearning to Baree; the heart-thrilling call of the lonely graves back on Gray Loon, of the burned cabin, the abandoned tepee beyond the pool—and of Nepeese. In his sleep he saw visions of things. He heard again the low, sweet voice of the Willow, felt the touch of her hand, was at play with her once more in the dark shades of the forest—and Carvel would sit and watch him as he dreamed, trying to read the meaning of what he saw and heard.

In April Carvel shouldered his furs up to the Hudson's Bay Company's post at Lac la Biche, which was still farther north. Baree accompanied him halfway, and then—at sundown Carvel returned to the cabin and found him there. He was so overjoyed that he caught the dog's head in his arms and hugged it. They lived in the cabin until May. The buds were swelling then, and the smell of growing things had begun to rise up out of the earth.

Then Carvel found the first of the early Blue Flowers.

That night he packed up. "It's time to travel," he announced to Baree. "And I've sort of changed my mind. We're going back—there."

And he pointed south.

CHAPTER XXX

A strange humor possessed

Carvel as he began the southward journey. He did not believe in omens, good or bad. Superstition had played a small part in his life, but he possessed both curiosity and a love for adventure, and his years of lonely wandering had developed in him a wonderfully clear mental vision of things, which in other words might be called singularly active imagination. He knew that some irresistible force was drawing Baree back into the south—that it was pulling him not only along a given line of the compass, but to an exact point in that line. For no reason in particular the situation began to interest him more and more, and as his time was valueless, and he had no fixed destination in view, he began to experiment. For the first two days he marked the dog's course by compass. It was due southeast. On the third morning Carvel purposely struck a course straight west.

He noted quickly the change in Baree—his restlessness at first, and after that the dejected manner in which he followed at his heels. Toward noon Carvel swung sharply to the south and east again, and almost immediately Baree regained his old eagerness, and ran ahead of his master.

A week later Baree answered

Carvel's question by swinging westward to give wide berth to Post Lac Bain. It was mid-afternoon when they crossed the trail along which Bush McTaggart's traps and deadfalls had been set. Baree did not even pause. He headed due south, travelling so fast that at times he was lost to Carvel's sight. A suppressed but intense excitement possessed him, and he whined whenever Carvel stopped to rest—always with his nose sniffing the wind out of the south. Springtime, the flowers, earth turning green, the singing of birds, and the sweet breaths in the air were bringing him back to that great Yesterday when he had belonged to Nepeese. In his unreasonable mind there existed no longer a winter. The long months of cold and hunger were gone; in the new visions that filled his brain they were forgotten. The birds and flowers and the blue skies had come back, and with them the Willow must surely have returned, and she was waiting for him now, just over there beyond that rim of green forest.

It was the wanderer's intention to swing over into the country of the Great Slave, a good eight hundred miles to the north and west, before the mush-snows came. From there, when the waters opened in springtime, he planned to travel by canoe westward to the Mackenzie and ultimately to the mountains of British Columbia. These plans were changed in February. They were caught in a great storm in the Wholala Lake country, and when their fortunes looked darkest Carvel stumbled on a cabin in the heart of a deep spruce forest, and in this cabin there was a dead man. He had been dead for many days, and was frozen stiff. Carvel chopped a hole in the earth and buried him. The cabin was a treasure trove to Carvel and Baree, and especially to the man. It evidently possessed no other owner than the one who had died; it was comfortable and stocked with provisions; and more than that its owner had made a splendid catch of fur before he died. Carvel went over them carefully and joyously. They were worth a thousand dollars at any post, and he could see no reason why they did not belong to him now. Within a week he had blazed out the dead man's snow-covered trap-line and was trapping on his own account. This was two hundred miles north and west of the Gray Loon, and soon Carvel observed that Baree did not face directly south in those moments when the strange call came to him, but south and east. And now, with each day that passed, the sun rose higher in the sky; it grew warmer; the snow softened underfoot, and in the air was the tremulous and growing throb of spring. With these things came the old yearning to Baree; the heart-thrilling call of the lonely graves back on Gray Loon, of the burned cabin, the abandoned tepee beyond the pool—and of Nepeese. In his sleep he saw visions of things. He heard again the low, sweet voice of the Willow, felt the touch of her hand, was at play with her once more in the dark shades of the forest—and Carvel would sit and watch him as he dreamed, trying to read the meaning of what he saw and heard.

In April Carvel shouldered his furs up to the Hudson's Bay Company's post at Lac la Biche, which was still farther north. Baree accompanied him halfway, and then—at sundown Carvel returned to the cabin and found him there. He was so overjoyed that he caught the dog's head in his arms and hugged it. They lived in the cabin until May. The buds were swelling then, and the smell of growing things had begun to rise up out of the earth. Then Carvel found the first of the early Blue Flowers. That night he packed up. "It's time to travel," he announced to Baree. "And I've sort of changed my mind. We're going back—there." And he pointed south.

Daily Cross Word Puzzle

The way to solve the Cross Word Puzzle is to fill in the white squares of the diagram with the words which agree with the accompanying definitions. The definitions are numbered to correspond with the numbers on the diagram.

Any word defined in the text under "HORIZONTAL" will begin at its number, shown on the diagram, and will extend all the way across to the first black space to the right of that number. That is, the word must begin in the square that contains its identifying number, and extend as far as the white squares continue uninterruptedly.

Any word defined under "VERTICAL" will also begin in the white space that contains its number, but will extend downward as far as the white space remains uninterrupted.

"Unseeing Eyes" at "Little Robinson Crusoe," With Jackie Coogan as Star at The California Today

"Unseeing Eyes," pictured by the Cosmopolitan Corporation from Alvin Stricker's popular story, and said to be the most thrilling film ever woven around life in the Canadian north woods, opens at the Richmond theatre today.

Many of the scenes were filmed 10,000 feet above sea level at a dangerous camera exploits were demonstrated over and over again. The story itself is thrilling and fast moving and for its interpretation on the screen the Cosmopolitan Corporation assembled a brilliant cast of players.

Lionel Barrymore and Seena Owen are featured and others who appear in the cast include Louis Wolheim, Paul Power, George von Seffelt, Walter Miller, Louis Dear, Don Red Dake and Frances Red Eagle.

"Unseeing Eyes" was directed by E. H. Griffith, who directed "The Godfather" for Cosmopolitan, Ray and Weider, author of "Within This Law" and "The Thirteenth Chair," adapted the story to the screen. The interior settings were designed by Joseph Urban. William Frederick Peters has composed an original musical score to accompany the picture.

Other features on the same program include Ruth Roland in the second thrilling chapter of "Haunted Valley," "Felix Saves the Day" and Felix, the cat cartoon.

Romance Glitters In Film at Church

Romance glitters and lures in one of the finest motion pictures of adventure of the season, "The Man From Brodways" which will be shown at the Wesley M. E. Church, Ninth street and Nevin avenue, Friday evening, at 7:15.

This Vitaphone special production, based upon the famous novel of the same name by George Barr McCutcheon, realistically depicts the story as originally written. All the breath of adventure of the Southern Seas, of savage natives, of erring husbands of faithful wives and of a great sympathetic love are contained in this remarkable photoplay.

"The Man From Brodways" opens with the meeting of Hollingsworth Chase, an American diplomatic representative, played by that stirring actor, J. Warren Kerrigan, meeting and falling in love with the beautiful Princess Geneva (Alice Calhoun). Chase sees Prince Karl force unwelcome attentions upon the Princess. Not knowing that he is her fiancé, the diplomat interferes and inflicts a beating upon the Prince. For this indiscretion Chase loses his diplomatic post.

After that an amazing adventure film is unfolded. It would be folly to reveal the story before it is seen on the screen. A silver offering of all that is required to see this colorful movie.

PALM SUNDAY PROGRAM AT ST. EDMUND'S CHURCH

Special music entirely appropriate for the day has been provided for both services at St. Edmund's church on Palm Sunday. The vested choir will enter the church in procession, at the morning service, bearing palms, and singing "All Glory, Land and Honor to Thee, Redeemer King." Berthold Tours' Holy Communion service will be sung, while Herbert Caswell, well known tenor, will render "The Palms."

It's a long way from wicker shoes, dikes, canals, windmills and a winter cold of the winter that visits the Finnish countryside to the coconut palms, banana trees and straws thatched huts of a remote bay, South Sea island, but that's the jump Jackie Coogan has taken between "A Boy of Flanders" and his newest Metro-Gwyneth picture, "Little Robinson Crusoe," which comes to the California Theatre, starting today.

Jackie as the modern, juvenile counterpart of the hero of Daniel Defoe's book, "Robinson Crusoe," has a clothing time to his new role. The story was written by a peerless for Jackie by W. L. Mar, and tells of a lonely child, a San Francisco boy, who is cast away on a tramp steamer, found by a tropical typhoon and all on a small island, except Jackie, who is a lonely finds himself cast up on South Sea island, his only companion the ship's cat, whom he dubs "Friday."

The amazing experiences and adventures of the boy and his cat on the island, isolated chiefly by tropical blacks, provides a story entirely at variance with any of those which have thus far served as starring vehicles for the tiny center. The appeal of the film is wide, and was produced as entertainment for the whole family.

The supporting cast includes Tom Santschi, Gloria Gray, Will Walling, Bert Sprague, Noble Johnson, Ted Dierckx and C. H. Wilson. It was produced under the supervision of Jack Coogan, Sr.

Other features on the same program include Will Rogers in his latest comedy "Fustlin' Hank"; International News; Larry Conlon at the organ.

California Tests New Film Device

Third dimension in screen has gradually been achieved at the California theatre since the installation of a new device which affects a shadow behind the picture.

A parabolic mirror projecting a beam of light through a prismatic lens apparently throws the picture away from the screen. This is accomplished without in any way affecting the amount of light that reaches the screen or the sharpness of outline.

The result of this experiment is a satisfyingly high intensity projection new forms an artistic background. Studios employ technical directors to create lighting effects and these are seen in their original beauty with the aid of this new device.

THE GASOLINE TAX

In response to a telegram from the Legislative Committee of the State Supervisors Association, requesting, in the name of all boards of supervisors, that the Standard Oil Company withdraw its opposition to an increase in gasoline taxation, K. R. Kingsbury, President of the Standard Oil Company, sent the following telegram:

"There has been so much misrepresentation of the attitude of this Company toward proposals to increase gasoline taxation that we are very glad of this opportunity explicitly to state to you and your associates and the organization represented, our policy and our activity in this matter.

"This Company is and always has been a supporter of good roads and in the present situation is not in opposition to the expansion of California's highway system, but only to the proposed method of raising the additional funds said to be necessary.

"We are opposed to any increased taxation of gasoline as a matter of principle. The tax is virtually a sales tax on a product which we sell. The three-cent tax would be a tax of twenty per cent on the wholesale price of gasoline in San Francisco. There is no marketer of any commodity who would not object to a twenty per cent sales tax on his product.

"Believing the tax to be wrong in principle and unfair to our business, this Company some months ago announced its opposition and with all possible candor stated its position as clearly as it knew how—frankly, publicly and openly.

"In its examination of the situation the Company, from its long experience and study of probable future consumption of gasoline, estimated that revenues under present motor taxation laws would yield the sums said to be required for roads, and these facts were made public, not only as an argument against further taxation, but also because good citizenship demands that anyone in possession of important facts regarding a public question should set them forth.

"This Company's activity has not been confined to California. With equal frankness it announced its opposition in Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona where new gasoline taxation has been agitated, as did numerous other interests. The legislatures in these States have adjourned without action except in Nevada.

"Your telegram states that the Company's opposition is so resented that the result will react against it. It is impossible to believe that any company operating in the State of California will, because it ventures frankly to express its opinion of a public proposal which it believes inimical to its welfare, suffer in official or public esteem, which we are pleased to believe this Company enjoys to a marked degree. We believe our position to be so right and sound from an economic or any other point of view, that we can not renounce it as you request."

Plans Completed For Baseball League's Dance

Plans for the opening dance of the Richmond Twilight baseball league, to be held in the Richmond clubhouse on the evening of Friday, April 17, were completed at a meeting of the league managers held last night.

Terry Hennessey was selected as floor manager. Denny Shaw's orchestra has been engaged, and every thing has been done to make the event one of the leading affairs of the season. Committees in charge are, Dick Austin, chairman; Elmer Hansen and Mr. Bishop.

Tickets have already been printed and are now in the hands of the committees for distribution. It is hoped that one of the largest crowds on record will be present as the proceeds are to be used to finance the baseball league for the season.

RADIO CLUB TUNES IN ON LONG DISTANCE

The members of the Richmond Radio club spent an enjoyable time after their business meeting held last night in the city hall, experimenting with a three-tube reflex set, equipped with a temporary aerial and they had little difficulty in tuning in on KGW, KFI, KHJ, and KNN on the loud speaker through the local stations.

A new member, John Aunyk, was admitted into the club at the last night.

A discussion of the B battery eliminators and alternative current filament supply followed the business meeting. This discussion was entered into by all those present and it was decided that a most profitable time had been spent.

My Matrimonial Vacation

by VIOLET DARE

AUTHOR OF "The Half-Time Wife," "The Husband Tamer," "One Wife on Approval," etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

NANCY LARRABEE is living with her mother.

VIRGINIA LELAND, in New York. Nancy's husband, an army officer, is stationed in the Philippines, and has left his wife behind. She believes that he cares more for another woman than he does for her. While visiting in the Bahama Islands Nancy falls in love with

BILL EWING, and returns to New York, planning to get a divorce and marry him. Her mother is much interested in

FRANK HARRISON, an elderly bachelor.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XXXVII—VIRGINIA GOES SOUTH

I DINED that evening with Frank Harrison. He had changed since the last time that I saw him; he seemed to have something on his mind, something so important that he hardly bothered to talk with me.

At one time I wouldn't have minded that. Indeed, I'd have been glad not to be bothered with talking to him.

But, of course, as soon as I saw that the indifference was on his sides, not on mine, it annoyed me.

"Tell me," he said at last, abruptly, as I was beginning to consider throwing something on the floor or doing something else that was desperate in order to attract his attention, "don't you think your mother has changed lately?"

"I've hardly seen Virginia since I came home," I answered. "Perhaps she has. She's a very changeable person."

"But I mean—well, she's so different. She used to be so talkative, and entertaining, and now she's very quiet, and—"

"Then it's catching," I cut in. "You've hardly spoken to me all through dinner, and certainly you have something on your mind."

"I have," he answered. "Come out to this balcony where we can talk."

I went. But he didn't seem to feel very talkative even then. However, at last he told me what was the matter.

"I've never been as fond of anyone else as I am of your mother," he said. "Do you think she cares for me?"

"Of course I do," I answered. "She cares a great deal for you." I was judging, of course, by the way she'd felt when I went South.

"Well, I used to think she did," he said, after a moment. "But lately she's so different. She doesn't seem to be interested in anything but the mail and the long-distance telephone."

When he spoke of the mail my first thought was of my husband. But second thought told me that Virginia would never be so concerned over messages from Jim that she'd ignore Frank Harrison.

"I'm very much in love with your mother," he went on. "I want to ask her to be my wife. But I don't want to ask her unless I feel fairly sure that she'll accept me. I did feel sure until just lately. Now—well, I don't know."

I was more perplexed than ever. I knew that before I went South Virginia would have liked nothing better than to marry him. What in the world could have changed her? "She'll be home when I get there this evening," I told him. "And I'll see then if I can find out what's on her mind."

Virginia had come in just for a few moments that afternoon and then gone out again, telling me that she had an engagement to dine and go to the theater with some friends whom I didn't know.

She was home when I got there, waiting for a long-distance call, she said.

"It's from your father," she added. "Or, rather, from a man who is staying with him down South. He hasn't been well, and I was to be informed at once if he got worse. They're afraid of pneumonia."

"But—" I stopped, just on the verge of saying that I hadn't supposed she'd care if Dad did have pneumonia. I remembered her saying when he left her that she hoped she'd never see him again.

"Oh, I know what you're going to say," she broke in. "And I can see why, of course. Your father and I always quarreled; we never were happy. But somehow now, when he's ill—and I haven't seen him for so long, I can see now we both made mistakes. I'd go down there now, but he doesn't want me to. He doesn't even know that I know he's ill."

That was exactly like Virginia, I told myself. Now that it began to look as if she never could go back to Dad, she wanted him. Or perhaps it was something deeper than mere perversity that urged her on. I thought of Nick and his wife, and of the feeling for Jim that I couldn't quite get rid of.

And I wondered if there wasn't something about marriage that can't quite be tossed into the discard, even when people feel that they have ceased to care for each other. Perhaps man can't put asunder those whom God has joined together, even though divorce is so common.

"Why don't you go down South anyway?" I asked. "He'd be glad to see you, surely."

"I'm afraid he wouldn't," she answered. "I used to be sure that he hated me. But then, perhaps if he saw me now, and realized that I do care for him, that I can't help it—"

"I'd go, if I were you," I said. She had changed so, I could hardly believe that she was the same woman. She left early the next morning for Carolina.

And as I waved to her from the station platform I wondered if I'd have rushed off that way if Jim had been ill.

OUCH! BACKACHE! RUB LUMBAGO AWAY

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a 35 cent bottle of old, honest St. Jacobs Oil at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your aching back, and the soreness and lameness is gone.

In use for 65 years, this soothing, penetrating oil takes the pain right out, and ends the misery. It is absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

He explained the disaster and the rescue work illustrating his lecture with numerous vivid scenes thrown on a screen. He told how it had taken 21 days to find the first 46 of the 47 entombed men, and how it was nearly a year later when the last was found on a level 150 feet below where the first were lying.

The session last night was the regular stated meeting, and was presided over by B. E. Scoble, worshipful master. A banquet was served after the meeting by an able committee headed by A. C. Rogers.

Roosevelt Junior Wins 7th Straight

When the Roosevelt Junior High school basketball team defeated the Parkhurst Junior high nine, 8 to 3 yesterday it reduced its total of games won by its season record to 7 out of 7 games played. This is the last game until after the Easter vacation, or in other words, the season is now about one half over. With his teachers working in the future as they have been working lately, Coach George Miner, feels that he has little to worry about, concerning a clean sweep for the season.

Plato was on the mound for the locals and as usual paraded his stuff to good advantage, allowing but 2 hits. Plato was a late but heavy "find" of Miner's and with him alternating with the already famous Gomez, it is believed that the Roosevelt aggregation can more than hold its own with any other team in the vicinity.

"BOBBY" FAILS TO GREET PALS ...HE IS DEAD

To the Editor,
Record-Herald,
Richmond, California.

Dear Editor—I have a little story to tell about a dog that was and a mean man that is, or maybe he isn't mean, but just thoughtless. Anyway, I want him and a lot of other folks in Richmond to read this so that the heart-breaking thing that has happened to my little family might not happen to another family in our city.

"Bobby" is dead. For some months—ever since he was old enough to leave his little Spaniel mother—Bobby has been in our home. He was a delight to my wife and me and the "pal" and playmate to our two-year old son, Jack. The first thing in the morning Jack wanted to see "Bobby" as he called our little dog, and "Bobby" was always at the front door waiting to be let into the house. His greeting was over the same—every muscle in his little body quivered and wiggled in expressions of joy to see us—but in the morning when we open the door "Bobby" will not greet us. I have to cry as I write this—but I'm not ashamed of my tears. Bobby was a good, faithful, cheerful, harmless, and worth-while friend.

There's a man lives in our neighborhood who some time ago threatened to kill Bobby because Bobby was passing through the barking stage of his life. From all appearances he has made good his threat. Bobby was poisoned and died a horrible and agonizing death a little while ago. This man has a dog and not so very long ago his dog barked a great deal at night, too, but no one was thoughtless or mean enough to kill him. In the morning when this thoughtless neighbor of mine goes out to crank his car, his own dog will give him a kindly greeting, little knowing the sin that is in his master's heart. I hope that man reads this and I hope that every time he sees a dog or hears a dog bark in the night the vision of our poor little innocent Bobby, who meant so much to us and who never harmed this man, will rise up in his memory and haunt him until he prays to God for forgiveness and a change of heart! I do not hate my neighbor—I feel sorry for him.

Respectfully,
M. H. GREENLEE

WAR VETERANS SPONSOR NEW FLAG SYSTEM

The proposition of selling side-walk flags by the Veterans of Foreign Wars to raise funds for their coming convention here in June, is meeting with hearty response by the merchants and business men along Macdonald avenue, it was stated yesterday by Ralph Wood, chairman of the convention committee, who is in charge of the sale of the flags.

The flags are for the purpose of decorating the streets on patriotic holidays and other similar days, and will be mounted on standards, to be held in sockets set in the curb. It is hoped that the proceeds of the sale will finance the convention, as well as provide the city with plenty of decorations.

Those who wish to purchase flags, either for their business block or private residence, and are not solicited, may get in touch with Wood at 238 Fifteenth street, or may call J. H. Fitzpatrick at his office at Twelfth and Macdonald.

William Vosbeck, presided as dictator. Those named to fill officers has been made as yet, but the work will probably be done by the local team.

After the meeting the members enjoyed a radio program, receiving the music and vocal selections over a five-tube Fried-Eisenman set, furnished by Theodore Iverson. The program was thoroughly enjoyed by all members as well as by the visitors from Tucson, Arizona, and Salt Lake City, Utah.

Installation of the new officers will take place on Thursday evening, April 30. No decision as to who will be selected to install the of-

WHAT'S INSIDE YOUR MATTRESS?

The HOEY "Neverspread"— Look for the Purple Line

IN the HOEY "Neverspread" mattress, a sheet of nonstretchable cloth is spread through the center of the mattress and firmly sewed to the sides. The filling is tufted to this cloth, and thus is prevented from "carrying away" from the center. This patented Binding Cloth, which gives the HOEY mattress its lasting quality, is sewed to the walls of the mattress with purple thread, making the Purple Line.

Look for the Purple Line. It means—"Built with the Binding Cloth."
